Biography

I grew up on my parents' farm in Giswil. This environment shaped me from an early age and taught me values such as perseverance and responsibility. I discovered my enthusiasm for winter sports at an early age and initially did cross-country skiing for several years. I switched to biathlon when I was 18. This sport requires not only physical fitness, but also precision and mental strength. That fascinated me and continues to do so to this day. After lower secondary school in Giswil, I attended Sportmittelschule Engelberg, where I completed grammar school. The combination of intensive training and school education was not always easy, but it showed me how important it is to plan, set goals and persevere. After obtaining my baccalaureate, I left home and focused entirely on professional sport. Since then, my daily life has been devoted to training, competitions and the desire to continuously improve.
